Road Safety Guidelines

When you, as a Team Rynkeby participant, take part in road traffic wearing team colours, you have a special obligation to comply with the Road Traffic Act and, in general, act in the interest of the project.

It is primarily about your own, your team-mates' and your fellow road users' safety – but it's also about the reputation of the project in the public eye. We cannot abide accidents caused by irresponsible driving, nor can we tolerate the negative comment that results from bad behaviour in traffic.

Team Rynkeby must be the most considerate and law-abiding cycling team in Europe, and therefore six road conduct guidelines have been formulated with which all Team Rynkeby participants must comply.

Law-abiding

1. I am a law-abiding cyclist who knows and adheres to the Road Traffic Act.
2. I am particularly familiar with the section of the Road Traffic Act that pertains to cyclists.
3. My bike is legal and among other things fitted with bell and reflectors.

Responsible

4. I respect my fellow road users – including pedestrians, cyclists, and motorists.
5. I take my waste home with me and would never discard it in nature.

Welcoming

6. I am aware that when I wear my team colours that my actions reflect on me, my team-mates and the entire project that we are working for.
7. I'm kind and welcoming and always thank others politely when they make room for me.

Best regards and with the wish for a good and safe cycling season.
